AN INSTANT CLASSIC -- YA SCIENCE FICTION AT ITS FINEST - Chanticleer Reviews AN INTELLIGENT, INSPIRING ADVENTURE -- Kirkus Reviews THIS SERIES HAS A CHANCE TO MAKE IT BIG -- SFReader It's been sixteen years since a reclusive child prodigy brought civility back to the digital world with the release of an AI based computer that required a simple please and thank you to function fully. Now he is about to unleash a new technology that could threaten the world. Two teens and a female reporter are drawn into an exciting and dangerous adventure. Cameron Rush and Rosa Costas are best friends, even though they have never met in person. Cameron lives in Troy, a small town in Wisconsin, while Rosa lives on a ranch outside Albuquerque, New Mexico. Cameron's schoolmates call him boring. He's an A/B student, second-seat trumpet in the school band, fourth-string halfback, and tenth-man on the basketball team. He is unbelievably meek and takes grief for it from others. He likes a challenge. At 5-1, Rosa Costas is vivacious and petite. She is as...
